TL;DR & Editorial Take

The US market saw a mixed session, with the Dow Jones surging +1.14% while the Nasdaq 100 fell -1.61%. The S&P 500 remained flat, closing at 7,483.24. Key takeaways include:

- The Dow's gain was driven by a +4.84% surge in AAPL and a +1.62% increase in MSFT.
- The Nasdaq 100's decline was led by a -7.49% drop in TSLA and a -4.90% fall in META.
- The VIX fell -2.65% to 16.15, indicating decreased volatility.

The market's mixed performance suggests that investors are cautiously optimistic about the economy, but remain wary of potential risks. The surge in AAPL and MSFT indicates that investors are seeking safe-haven stocks with strong fundamentals.

However, the decline in TSLA and META suggests that investors are also concerned about the potential risks associated with high-growth stocks. Overall, the market's mixed performance suggests that investors are navigating a complex landscape, and that careful analysis and risk management are essential.
